We have received your request for information and will consider it in accordance with the World Bank Policy on Access to Information.

In most cases, we will be able to respond within twenty (20) working days from receipt of a request for information. However, we may need additional time in special circumstances, for instance, if the request is complex or voluminous or if it requires further review by or consultation with internal World Bank units, external parties, the Access to Information Committee, or the World Bank's Board of Executive Directors (see the World Bank Policy on Access to Information for more details). We regret any inconvenience that a delay would cause you and, if one does occur, will aim to minimize it as much as possible. We will notify you promptly of any updates to the status of your request.

Please note that the World Bank Policy on Access to Information governs access to information in the possession of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (IBRD) and the International Development Association (IDA). Requests for access to information from institutions governed by other disclosure regimes will be referred to the appropriate institution.

If you submitted an appeal challenging the Bank's decision to deny access to information you requested, the AIC will consider the appeal in accordance with the AI Policy. Pursuant to the AI Policy, the AIC makes it best efforts to reach a decision on appeals within 45 working days of receiving an appeal and delays are communicated in writing to the requester (see AI Policy, at Section III.B.8(b).i)

Thank you for your interest in the World Bank.
