Project Description

According to Asian Development Bank documents, the proposed project will support Suguna expansion across 13 identified states in India with the construction of 20 feed mills, four environment-controlled sheds for breeders, eight hatcheries, and various meat processing lines; and the expansion of the company contract farming program from 40,000 to 55,000 smallholder poultry farmers.

The Technical assistance (TA) will strengthen the capacity of women for engagement as contract poultry farmers. The TA will focus on building the farm management skills and financial literacy of 4,500 women contract farmers. The project will improve livelihoods and gender inclusion in rural areas, reduce malnutrition through the production of affordable proteins, and mitigate the impact of livestock farming on the environment and on climate change."

The outputs of the project are: (i) feed production capacity increased, (ii) poultry farming capacity increased, (iii) poultry meat production capacity increased, (iv) the company has become more gender-equitable, and (v) women farmers trained in poultry farming techniques and financial literacy.
