Project Description

According to the Bank's website, the regional knowledge and support technical assistance (TA) will enable the economies of Caucasus and Central Asia (CCA) to assess the demand for new forms and directions of regional cooperation in light of the implications of the Russian invasion of Ukraine and conflicts in the region by (i) systematically collecting additional information on the related socioeconomic developments, (ii) analyzing regional trade flows, and (iii) reviewing alternative transit options. All three TA outputs will include policy recommendations for the Asian Development Bank (ADB) and the CCA governments, as well as the production of policy briefs and other publications or reports that will be accessible online.
