Project Description

According to the Bank's website, this TA will support the implementation of selected priority activities under the recently approved Disaster Risk Management Action Plan (DRMAP) 2024-2030. The DRMAP refocuses ADB's efforts to enhance disaster resilience in Asia Pacific to more proactively reduce disaster risks through structural and nonstructural investments. This will be achieved by focusing TA engagement and support to pipeline lending through three interlinked strategic work streams, namely i) Improving disaster risk knowledge and risk informed planning tools; ii) Increased investments in disaster risk reduction (DRR); and iii) Increased investment in disaster preparedness and mainstreaming Disaster Risk Financing (DRF) into resilient development and recovery.

Over the period 2015-2024, extreme weather and geophysical events in Asia and the Pacific have resulted in 70,775 fatalities, affecting about 998 million people, and causing an estimated $651 billion in damages, underscores the need for effective and resilient recovery. Women and children, who are 14 times more likely to die during disasters than men, face greater vulnerabilities.

Investing in DRM is a cost-effective strategy that yields high economic and social returns. Studies indicate that every $1 spent on disaster resilience results in $4-$7 in avoided losses. This funding request aims to complement ongoing TAs and bridge the gap between existing DRM efforts and the urgent need for scaled up, coordinated action that integrates risk knowledge, risk reduction, and preparedness across sectors.
