Project Description

According to bank provided information, this project aims to conduct a comprehensive feasibility study to assess opportunities for increasing food productivity and strengthening value chains in the Ribaua District, located in Nampula Province, northern Mozambique. The study will identify constraints and potential interventions across the agricultural sector, focusing on sustainable production, market access, post-harvest management. It will also evaluate the institutional, environmental, and socio-economic factors critical to the success of future investments. Ultimately, the goal is to design a program that enhances food security, supports smallholder farmers, and promotes inclusive economic development in one of the country's key agricultural regions.
