Project Description

According to the Bank's website, the overall objective of the PADSP-AI is to strengthen Chad's economic resilience by supporting private sector development, with the goal of effectively contributing to economic diversification and structural transformation. More specifically, the project aims to support the establishment of an appropriate institutional framework to: (i) upgrade private sector governance mechanisms, and (ii) build the capacities of youth and women entrepreneurship stakeholders.

The direct beneficiaries of the PADSP-AI are public institutions (National Agency for Investment and Exportation - ANIE), public funds (the Youth Entrepreneurship Fund), private sector promotion structures (the Chamber of Commerce, Industry, Agriculture, Mines, and Handicrafts; the Chad Business House; and the National Chamber of Women Entrepreneurship), as well as women and young entrepreneurs.

Small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) will be indirect beneficiaries, as they will have the opportunity to access new financial resources and partnership opportunities, thereby contributing to a more inclusive and sustainable growth of the private sector.

Furthermore, with the aim of increasing access to public procurement for the Chadian private sector, the Public Procurement Regulatory Authority (ARMP) will be equipped with the necessary capacities and tools to strengthen the transparency and efficiency of the national public procurement system.
