Project Description

The Project is expected to have a highly developmental impact in Brazil by upgrading public lighting and smart city infrastructure in Rio de Janeiro. Brazil's infrastructure spending is estimated to be less than two percent of GDP, which is lower than the estimated depreciation of existing assets. For this Project, the use of LEDs is expected to abate Rio de Janeiro's use of electricity for street lighting by between 40 and 60 percent. In addition, this Project will also support the city's ongoing digitalization of services, with expected improvements in resident satisfaction in core areas such as public safety, traffic, and sewage control.
