Project Description

According to the Bank's website, the project consists of the provision of USD 70 million working capital facility to be used for sourcing of raw cashew nuts and other agriculture commodities in Cote d'Ivoire and Nigeria.

The proposed financing will enable the sponsor's subsidiaries in Cote d'Ivoire and Nigeria to increase sourcing of cashew nuts and other agricultural commodities, for further processing and export to global markets.

The transition impact of the project stems from (i) Competitive, as the operation will improve the operational efficiency of the sponsor's subsidiary in Cote d'Ivoire beyond prevailing standards in the country; and (ii) Inclusive, as the operation will entail tailored training modules for Robust own local workforce. Furthermore, the operating shall enable the sponsor to increase its engagement within its sesame and cashew nuts supply chain, by delivering tailored training on best farming practices, thereby promote the sustainability of farmer's agricultural activities.

Early Warning System Project Analysis

Categorised B (2024 ESP).

The project includes exposure to the company's existing assets, including across four countries in Africa and a recently commissioned large cashew processing facility and warehouses in Côte d'Ivoire, and E&S risk issues inherent within the agricultural sourcing and processing sectors, which are particularly accentuated in relation to the local cashew farming and production activities taking place in a heightened context of environmental, social and economic vulnerability.

Key E&S risks currently being considered include: direct and sub-contracted workers' employment terms and working conditions, worker safety, child labour, working conditions and land use conversion in local cashew smallholder farms which make up core supply chains for the project, limited supply chain traceability, limited monitoring of farmers' working conditions and OSH, as well as resource use, solid waste and wastewater management, pesticide use, and community health & safety.
