Project Description

According to the FMO, the objective of the project is threefold, namely to:

- (i) train the resettled and relocated farmers and the local agricultural agency in crop rotation;
- (ii) raise awareness on the risks of cassava plantation; and
- (iii) improve the farmers livelihood on the mid- and long term.

Soil depreciation due to the use of cash crops like cassava and lack of crop diversity puts the farmers at risk of losing livelihood and face a loss of income generation while at the same time it damages the environment. Training the local agricultural organization will make sure that knowledge and skills will be transferred on a continuous basis. If successful, this program can serve as a best practice example and can be replicated by other hydropower clients of FMO with similar challenges.
