Project Description

According to IFC website, the proposed project involves renewal of the existing unfunded risk sharing facility with BTMU for a trade and commodity finance portfolio of up to US$200 million (with IFC investment of up to US$100 million) aiming at supporting agri, energy and metal sectors. The Project will enable BTMU to continue to fill the gap in financing the commodity trade that keeps critical food, energy and metal product supplies available in emerging markets, including IDA countries in Asia.

The renewed CCFP-BTMU facility is expected to continue having the following development impacts: (i) increased access to finance for trade of critical agriculture, energy and metals trading flows especially during market turbulence; and (ii) demonstration impact on local market development, promoting commodities as an asset class, and encouraging local/regional banks to participate in funding trade flows hence ultimately supporting growth, revenues and sustaining employment in respective commodity trading countries.
