The expected development impacts are:

1. Economic diversification: The Project will contribute to the country's strategic objective of economic diversification, through development of agribusiness sector, where Kazakhstan has significant potential.
2. Employment creation: The Project will contribute to job creation, including in frontier regions of Kazakhstan, where there are higher poverty rates and limited employment opportunities.
3. Food security via continuing exports of flour to grain deficit countries of Central Asia (including Tajikistan and Afghanistan).
4. Domestic value addition: By supporting domestic processing of agricultural commodities into gluten, starch, fructose and packaged food products, the project promotes local value addition, stronger downstream linkages with SMEs, and acquisition of new skills by the local labor force.
