Project Description

According to IFC website, IFC is considering lending up to €180 million as part of a 10-year A-loan envelope to finance the €400 million investment program related to the expansion of the Kaufland format (~3,500 m² small hypermarkets) of food retail business of Schwarz Group in Romania, Bulgaria and Moldova over the next two years. The expected development impacts of the project are:

1. Affordable goods: Modern retail distribution introduces efficiencies which enables low pricing at high quality standards. The share of modern retail in food in Romania and Bulgaria is about half that of developed countries and even lower in Moldova. Expansion of organized retail in the Target Countries will promote access to affordable and high quality food products for low to middle income households.
2. Food safety: Modern retail formats contribute to food safety by improving supply chain efficiencies and reducing food wastage. Local procurements will encourage local producers to apply best practices in their production and operations, thus ensuring quality and safety.
3. Employment generation: The Project is expected to generate significant direct employment in the new stores, indirect employment in the supply chain as well as temporary employment during construction. Typically, women constitute more than 50% of the direct employment in retail stores.
4. Green buildings: New stores expansion through the Project is expected to have energy efficiency features and showcase green building best practices, which will potentially have a demonstrational effect on local building standards.
