Project Description

According to the IFC website, the project is an investment of senior loan in Jain Irrigation Systems Limited, India. Jain Irrigation Systems Limited is one of India's largest integrated agribusiness players, with operations in Micro Irrigation Systems, plastic pipes and sheets, dehydrated vegetables, processed fruits and other smaller businesses including tissue culture, agri-tech solutions and green energy.

The proposed investment will be used for a combination of capital expenditure in the company's Micro Irrigation Systems (MIS) business and debt refinancing.

The project's objectives are:

- 1) Raising farmer incomes: The adoption of MIS and better farming techniques is expected to reduce risk from weather, lower cost of farm inputs such as fertilizers and energy, and also increase yields. This will improve farmer income and have a direct impact on poverty reduction for those at the bottom of the pyramid.
- 2) Improved water management: India has 18% of the world's population and only 4% of the fresh water resources, and per capita availability is projected to keep declining. MIS improves water efficiency that will lead to improved water management and a smaller environmental footprint caused by agricultural growth.
- 3) Improved infrastructure: The Company manufactures pipes used for water supply, sewage, waste management supporting the Government of India's "Swachh Bharat" (Clean India) Mission.
