Project Description

In December 2017 IFC signed a Project Services Agreement with Heineken in Ethiopia to improve the quality and quantity of smallholder-based malt barley production.

The two year project (2018-2019) will focus on

- (a) improving the productivity of 40,000 smallholder farmers through agronomic training and the distribution of high yielding seed varieties,
- (b) building the business management capacity of around 80 malt barley aggregators
- (c) investigation of farmer financing models, and
- (d) supporting a multi-stakeholder working group to realize Ethiopia's potential as a regionally competitive malt barley producer.

The project should result in an additional annual production of 100 000 metric tonnes of barley for both food uses and further processing.
