Project Description

As stated by the IFC, the project consists of five components that flow from the project objective; the components allow the team to: finalize and share the regenerative agriculture framework (Component 1); operationalize the framework in for IFC Sustainable Crop Production Advisory (Component 2), Animal Protein Advisory (Component 3), and Investment (Component 4); and develop additional KM products to fill information gaps (Component 5).

The project will help prepare knowledge products to provide strategic and operational guidance for defining, piloting, and scaling regenerative agriculture Investment and Advisory at IFC, specifically:

1. Finalize and share IFC's Regenerative Agriculture Framework, through the preparation of supporting technical documents
2. Operationalize the framework for Investment, Sustainable Crop Production Advisory, and Sustainable Protein Advisory
3. Develop Knowledge Management (KM) products to meet technical information gaps and thought leadership opportunities, such as a need for specific case studies and ROI analyses, for guidance on the use of biologicals, or for a regen-aligned Catalogue of Nature-Based Solutions (NBS) for the agriculture sector.

It is expected that the KM products would benefit at least five IFC projects. This target will be reassessed two years into the program. The Implementation Plan would last three and a half years from July 2025 through December 2028, which will allow enough time to compile lessons from deployment of the Framework. The timeframe may be adjusted in response to budget availability.
