Project Description

As stated by the New Development Bank, the Project will be implemented in Liaoning Province, one of the first industrialized provinces in China, to tackle typical urban development problems in the region - deteriorated water bodies, inadequate urban connectivity and recurrent urban flooding. Solution to these problems is critical to ensure transformation of these cities from "old industrial bases" into new urban agglomerations attractive to talents and new businesses, and to set their development on a sustainable path. Two steel cities have been selected by the provincial government to participate in the Project - Anshan and Lingyuan.
