Project Description

According to the Bank's website, the objective is to support the 2024 edition of FCMB's AgriTech Venture Building Program. It is a full-fledged incubation program for idea-stage agri-companies run by FCMB. Through the program, FCMB will identify scalable and impact-driven early-stage companies and provide them with access to knowledge, skills, funding, and networks, to take their ideas to the next level.

According to McKinsey & Company, more than 60% of the population in Sub-Saharan Africa consists of smallholder farmers and about 23% of Sub-Saharan Africa's GDP comes from agriculture. However, it is estimated that the agricultural potential of the region remains untapped. The production of grains and cereals has a tremendous upside potential (two or three times), which could add 20% to the global economy. Substantial investment is needed to allow Africa's agritech sector to fully utilize its capabilities. With an estimated worth of USD 1 trillion by 2030, Africa is positioned to emerge as the leading global hub for agricultural technology (Agtech) solutions.

The purpose of this initiative is to foster and accelerate the growth of scalable agri MSMEs, which is a core NASIRA target group. By supporting early-stage Agtech companies to scale up, we will contribute to increasing agricultural productivity and, indirectly, to food security and SDG 2 (zero Hunger), SDG 8 (Decent work and economic growth), and SDG 10 (Reduced inequalities).

As claimed by the Bank, the execution of this project is not only strategic from a social impact perspective, but also from a commercial point of view. FCMB has to accelerate the onboarding of MSME companies to further expand the portfolio covered by the NASIRA RSF. Through this TA initiative, FCMB and FMO have partnered to incubate 15 scalable early-stage agri-tech businesses in Nigeria. A hackathon will precede this incubation trajectory to identify disruptive business models that address pressing problems in the agricultural sector.
