Project Description

According to the Agency's document, this project finances the design, construction and operation of an 84km corridor of a tolled, dual-carriage highway in southwestern Colombia, including expansion of an existing single-carriage corridor to a dual-carriage highway, and construction of 27km of new highway.

According to the Agency, the major environmental and social concerns related to the Project include impacts to community health and safety resulting from increased traffic, influx of non-local workers and non-local peoples, noise and vibration; the need for robust and occupational health and safety procedures; soil erosion and spoil management; impacts to biodiversity; and the need for a robust environmental and social management system with appropriate organizational capacity given simultaneous multiple work fronts and ambitious timeline for construction.
