Project Description

As stated by the IFC, the project aims to promote private sector participation in the biofuel sector in Mozambique by conducting a market analysis and identifying necessary policy, legal, and institutional changes to facilitate private investments. The project will involve reevaluating the market feasibility for alternative crops as a part of the biofuel production process in Mozambique and identifying necessary policy, legal, and institutional changes to facilitate private investments. The project will share the findings with relevant authorities and the ongoing public-private dialogue on biofuels. The project will also promote awareness on promoting environmental and social standards, including preventing indirect land use change or deforestation to the detriment of food production and forests.

The project intends to promote investments in the entire value chain of biofuel production, including logistics, production, distribution/export, and storage, which could open opportunities for different instruments such as primary agriculture production, supply chain and processing, infrastructures and logistics, and financing instruments to support the development of supply and value chain in this sector.
